Davos-Klosters, Switzerland, 31 January 2009 – During the World Economic Forum Annual Meeting 2009 in Davos-Klosters, the Deworm the World (DtW) Task Force announced the expansion of deworming programmes in Kenya, Guyana, India and 12 other countries through the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP). Deworm the World is an initiative of the Forum of Young Global Leaders (YGLs).

Since the YGLs launched DtW in 2007, the task force has made a significant impact in promoting deworming around the world. In the words of Michael Kremer, Gates Professor of Developing Societies, Department of Economics, Harvard University, USA, a YGL and founding member of the task force: “The community of YGLs has focused their effort on this initiative because mass treatment of school children for parasitic worms, at a cost of less than 50 cents per child per year, is the most cost effective way to increase school participation of any approach rigorously tested.” The YGLs recognized that they could make a unique impact and meaningful difference by tackling this issue, and are increasing access to education by supporting, coordinating and advocating the expansion of school-based deworming programmes.

This week, President Bharrat Jagdeo of Guyana, also a YGL, announced his commitment to roll out deworming across Guyana and treat all school-age children in the country in 2009. Prime Minister Raila Amolo Odinga of Kenya announced the scale-up of sustained deworming programmes through a national school health programme to treat 3 million children in the most at-risk areas of the country in 2009. Josette Sheeran, Executive Director of the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP), Rome, announced a partnership with DtW to increase coverage to treat an additional 2 million children in 12 more countries in 2009 under WFP-assisted school feeding programmes. Vikram Akula, Founder and Chairman, SKS Microfinance, India, also a YGL, committed to using his company’s distribution network to treat 1 million school-age children through a pilot deworming programme that will launch this year.

Deworming is a challenge that plays to YGL strengths. The issue is global – spanning virtually every developing country – as is the YGL network. Kristin J. Forbes, Professor of Economics, Sloan School of Management, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, USA, a YGL and founding member of the task force, said of the progress made since launching this initiative: “Our experience with Deworm the World shows the amazing power, energy and synergies of the YGL network. YGLs from all sectors – including microfinance, media, fundraising, academia, NGOs and the private sector – have all made contributions of some kind to show that the community as a whole is much more powerful than the sum of its parts.”

YGL Alejandro Ramirez, Chief Executive Officer, Cinopolis, Mexico, another founding member of the task force, has produced a short film that is a call to action against parasitic worms. Directed by award-winning Eugenio Polgovsky, the film will premiere at the Deworm the World event in Davos on Friday 30 January.

The YGLs have raised the profile of this important issue and continue to work to expand deworming programmes across the globe. Many additional programmes are ready to launch as soon as funding for activities such as shipping and training are identified, potentially increasing worldwide coverage from 10% to 30% over three years.

About Deworm the World

At the World Economic Forum Annual Meeting 2007, the Education Task Force of the Young Global Leaders launched Deworm the World (DtW) to improve access to education through supporting, coordinating and advocating for school-based deworming programmes. DtW leverages the networks and talents of YGLs to promote the mass scale-up of deworming and works directly with governments and implementers to develop large-scale, cost-effective deworming strategies.

About the Forum of Young Global Leaders

Established in 2004 by Professor Klaus Schwab, The Forum of Young Global Leaders (www.younggloballeaders.org) is a unique, multistakeholder community of the world’s most extraordinary young leaders who dedicate a part of their time to jointly address global challenges and who are committed to devote part of their knowledge and energy to collectively work towards a better future. Together they engage in the 2030 Initiative, a comprehensive endeavour to understand current and future trends, risks and opportunities both at global and regional levels, formulate a positive vision for the world in 2030 and put forward concrete strategies and task forces to translate their vision into action.

The World Economic Forum is an independent international organization committed to improving the state of the world by engaging leaders in partnerships to shape global, regional and industry agendas. Incorporated as a foundation in 1971 and based in Geneva, Switzerland, the World Economic Forum is impartial and not-for-profit; it is tied to no political, partisan or national interests (<http://www.weforum.org>).
